Bravida gathers specialist areas in a new division

Bravida in Sweden is forming a new, national division for the technology areas security, cooling, sprinklers, technical service management and power supply. The purpose is to develop the growth potential and synergies in these areas.

Until now, Bravida's core business has included electrical, heating & plumbing, and HVAC. Now, the company is gathering its specialities into a separate division to make them a more clearly defined and larger part of the customer offering.

– Bravida has a clear ambition of strengthening our offering as a multi-technical service provider for our customers. We have a large unexploited market potential in these areas, and by gathering them in one division we will create better conditions for both growth and profitability, says Mattias Johansson, CEO and Group President, Bravida.

Sven Klockare, former Regional Manager for the specialist areas security, sprinklers and Erfator Project Management, will become head of the new division. Sven Klockare has worked within Bravida in different roles since the beginning of the 2000's and will be part of Bravida's Group Management.

– By gathering security, cooling, sprinklers, technical service management and power supply in a joint division, we will increase our focus on service, sales and delivery in these areas. We will also improve our possibilities of working with our national customers, says Sven Klockare, future Head of Division.

The areas which will become part of the division are present in locations all over Sweden, which means that the division will operate on a national level. Therefore, the new division will be named Riks. The division will be formally created in April 2017, when the work of structuring the operations will begin.
